ABSTRACT

Aspects of a scheduler for an adaptable computing engine are described. The aspects include providing a plurality of computation units as hardware resources available to perform a particular segment of an assembled program on an adaptable computing engine.

5   A schedule for the particular segment is refined by allocating the plurality of computation units in correspondence with a dataflow graph that represents the particular segment in an interactive manner until a feasible schedule is achieved.

19

2096P